What lessons can we learn from previous commemorations?

How do we make the semi quincennial meaningful to all Virginians?

What programs should be planned?

What would you like to see occur during this commemoration to highlight the history and culture of Virginia's Indigenous peoples? How do we get there?

Welcome and Chair’s Remarks

Chief Stephen Adkins, Chair, convened the second meeting of the VA250 Tribal Nations Leadership Advisory Council and thanked everyone for their participation.

He stressed the importance of our work in ensuring that this is a positive commemoration and unifying opportunity for all in which we promote understanding and empathy. The charge for our work: who we are, who we were, and where we’re going.

Remarks from VA250 Honorary Chair – Carly Fiorina

Carly’s directive: tell every story; the whole story. History belongs to all of us, this is a unifying opportunity, not a divisive one. The whole story unifies people. We must be accurate, complete, and meaningful.

Chief Adkins noted we feel pain, and we feel joy, we need to feel both to better understand each other.

VA250 July 4 Planning and Programming

The VA250 4th of July 2024 celebration will be held in Capital Square. Programming needs to include the human expression aspect of Virginia; importance of including documented speeches from Indigenous leaders (Chief Brown mentioned Chief Logan specifically). Understand that art, culture, food—it’s all part of education.

VA250 Emerging Leadership Fellows Program

Alton Coston, who joined virtually, was introduced as the first fellow in the VA250 program. Fellows will help ensure that VA250 programming is meeting Virginia's communities where they are; ensuring a commemoration that is inclusive of our vibrant communities and cultures across the Commonwealth. We are actively recruiting for a Fellow from the indigenous community and welcome nominations from the council. Fellows are paid a monthly stipend for their time and efforts in support of VA250.

Remarks from Carly Fiorina

- The VA250 Commission's 5 pillars drive our work and all programming must reflect those pillars
- We have a holistic approach to educate people in the Commonwealth over the next 3+ years; All Virginians should be educated in a different way by the time we get to 2026.
- We are all Americans; we have a shared beginning.
- We have an opportunity to reveal things as they truly were, so we can see who we really are.

Key takeaways

- Need more information about tribal enclaves, deep divisions but fighting against disposition and erasure. This is an important part of promoting healing.
- Share stories in a way that resonates warmly, steering clear of patronizing "kumbaya moments" in favor of genuine engagement.
- Tell stories of identity. How do we best reflect the stories and culture of people who played a pivotal role in shaping the nation? Accurate and reflective of how important Black and Native peoples were to the founding of America.
- Educate, eradicate the untruths. Rest on the SOLs, but expand them.
- Truth, opportunity, unity, education: keywords in this conversation

Next steps

- Identify a fellow from the indigenous community.
- Offer thoughts on July 4th events and programs. What and who should be included?
- VA250 staff to arrange individual meetings with each Council member to gather insights and input for shaping programming and the mobile museum.
- Next meeting set for Friday, May 3, 2024 at 10 am at Colonial Williamsburg

Chair’s Remarks and Charge to the Committee

Chief Stephen Adkins, Chair, convened the first meeting of the VA250 Tribal Nation Leaders Advisory Council and thanked everyone for participating in this important meeting. Chief Adkins noted that our nation’s 250th – its semiquincentennial – holds promise for all Americans, and all Virginians, to unite, engage, and inspire, and commit to ensuring that all stories are told and that all communities are engaged.

Chief Adkins asked members to reflect on the questions presented in the agenda and to provide solutions as we identify problems. The Chair called on members to join in ensuring that Virginia’s 250th is a commemoration in which every Virginian can see themselves, and that inspires hope in our collective march toward a more perfect Union.

VA250 Vision

Carly Fiorina, VA250 National Honorary Chair, shared the vision and goals for the commemoration and the opportunity to highlight the stories, people and places that are inclusive of all communities.

Chief Adkins thanked Ms. Fiorina and welcomed ideas and thoughts from the organization leadership members.

Jamie Bosket noted that VMHC is the oldest museum in the Commonwealth and has not always told the complete story. He sees the commemoration as a way to do better with the narrative and be inclusive.

Cliff Fleet echoed Mr. Bosket's words. Mr. Fleet spoke about what Colonial Williamsburg is doing to tell stories of marginalized communities. He stressed that CW and each of our organizations need the tribal nations to provide expertise and guidance.

Christy Coleman also echoed the comments from Mr. Bosket and Mr. Fleet. She highlighted the importance of using the resources available to tell the stories of those communities that do not have the resources, and stressed the importance of asking what they want to see rather than tell them what you plan to exhibit. She stressed that as Virginia leads the nation in this commemoration, we need everyone at the table.

VA250 Plans

Cheryl Wilson provided a brief overview of plans in development for the commemoration and the Chair turned the floor over to the members to offer discussion and reflections.

Discussion and Questions for Reflection:

What lessons can we learn from previous commemorations?

How do we make the semiquincentennial meaningful to all Virginians?

What programs should be planned?

What would you like to see occur during this commemoration to highlight the history and culture of Virginia's Indigenous peoples? How do we get there?

What are the under-told and under-known stories that should be highlighted statewide?

What should be our next steps?

Chief Anderson emphasized the importance of recognizing Indigenous peoples' protective connection to the land. Mentioned that an SAR chapter began with his tribe, and there are Patriots within his tribe. Stressed the need for a consistent presence.

Chief Bullock shared information about the tribe's museum, which is open seasonally. Suggested utilizing it for local schools to tell the tribe's story both locally and nationally. Mentioned the church organized in 1789, with significant figures buried in the cemetery. Acknowledged the importance of addressing difficult points in history to reach deeper and more positive knowledge on the other side.

Chief Brown highlighted the substantial indigenous contribution to the military. Noted the success of the mobile museum in Southampton County, with around 1000 visitors, presenting an opportunity for further engagement. He also stressed the importance of educating our educators about Virginia tribal history.

Chief Gray expressed a desire for the acknowledgment of native involvement in Bacon's Rebellion and military service. Emphasized the importance of featuring treaties, specifically those with Great Britain and the US post-independence. Addressed the ongoing impact of the US not honoring pre-existing treaties with Britain, affecting Virginia tribes today.

Chief Alston discussed the tribe's community interpretive center and acknowledged that many members of the community are unaware of their presence despite being there for centuries. Advocated for sharing native community stories during the revolution and finding historical nuggets of information. There were many tribes in the area with interesting dynamics.

Ms. Fiorina urged the group to provide information on events, places, and organizations to highlight. Emphasized collaboration to promote and amplify these highlights. Mentioned the possibility of using the VA250 logo if appropriate. Also, discussed the need for content for the mobile museum and suggested that tribal leaders can help represent the entire geography of the state.

Discussion continued with many suggestions:

- Explore creating a mobile museum subcommittee to provide content.
- Use the existing history trail app for content.
- Explore tribal nations' websites for additional resources.
- Bring the mobile museum to Indigenous communities to foster community connections.
- Reference the Library of Virginia exhibit, as it features all 11 tribes.
- Take advantage of grants offered by VMHC for tribes who are telling their stories.
- Explore inviting the director of the Virginia Tribal Education Commission to the group.
- Emphasize the importance of sharing hard truths without being adversarial.

Next steps:

- Offer thoughts on July 4th events and programs. What and who should be included?
- Explore specific topics for the next meeting.
- Set-up monthly meetings for the council between now and July.
